HER STORY OF HAYES.

Annie Keating's Evidence in His Trial for Perjury.

She Gave Up Her Child in Consideration of $2,800 in Bank.

Hayes, She Says, Took the Deposit Certificate From Her by Force.

The third day of the trial of Col. William B. Hayes, indicted for perjury, opened in Part II. General sessions, this forenoon, with every seat in the court-room occupied. The disclosures made yesterday concerning the relations between Hayes and Miss Annie M. Keating, the state's principal witness, whetted the court-going public's appetite for spicy details, and the attendance was greater, if possible, than yesterday.

There was a promise of more letters to be read in court, and it was with disappointed looks that the few women, who had some way edged by the doorkeeper, left the room at the order of the judge. Even the witnesses were excluded and were kept in an outer room, but within call.

When District-Attorney Weeks came into court he carried a big bundle of letters and papers. Asked if Hayes would be indicted for forgery in view of the facts that had come out in the trial, Mr. Weeks said that he did not think so.

"We shall undoubtedly convict him of perjury though," said Mr. Weeks. "What will be done after this trial is not for me to know."

Before court opened an "Evening World" reporter talked with Col. Hayes, who was confined in his cell, but asked that he be not printed until he got on the stand.

"You have only heard one side of this story so far," he said. "Wait until you hear the other story before you judge Hayes."

Speaking of his boy, "Billy," Hayes said: "I love Billy with all my heart, and we, this Mrs. Hayes and myself, would give anything to get possession of him."

Miss Keating was recalled to the stand by the prosecution to answer the questions asked by the reporter. She identified several letters written to her by Hayes, and said that she had seen the child after the birth of the boy, William Edward Hayes, April 11, 1887.

The letters were examined by Judge Martin and admitted as evidence, notwithstanding the objections of defendant's counsel, Mr. Hogan.

The first letter read was dated Detroit, April 13, 1887. It was a letter to the reporter, in which he calls her "My darling Annie," and speaks of her and her child. "My wife and boy," he asks that some letters in Annie's possession, written by him, be returned to him. "I have a wife and a boy to love," he writes. "I am a papa of a big boy, and the mother is a woman I love better than this world."

In the second letter, dated at Detroit, July 2, 1887, he says: "I am your wife, and you do not have to account to me for what you do."

Lawyer Hogan argued that the letters should not be admitted, but was overruled by the court.

Miss Keating then described the negotiations by which she agreed to give up the child for a consideration of $2,800. She said that she had signed a deed of gift, and that she had received the money from Hayes to deposit in the name of the child.

Hayes had asked her to go to the District-Attorney and try to get the present indictment dismissed, and on her refusal had threatened to have her arrested.

Hayes, according to Miss Keating, then demanded the certificate of deposit she carried in her bosom, and refused to give it up until she had received the certificate from her by force.

She then hurried upstairs to the bank to notify President Stearns. When she arrived there she found Hayes had reached there first. They went into the private office of the bank with Mr. Anderson, a notary, who had a desk there.

Hayes, Miss Keating said, then made a demand on her for the discounting paper to the Rochester case, which she still held. Hayes refused to give it up, and she then tried to take the paper from her bosom. Miss Keating said that she held the paper, and held it in the struggle.

Hayes placed both his hands on her cheeks and pinched her so as to make her let go, and finally got the papers away from her. Her trials were ended in the struggle, but which she saw him in court Monday last.

Hayes, she answered, did not intend to interfere except to say that he did not think Col. Hayes was that sort of man. That was the last she saw of Hayes until she saw him in court Monday last.

TWENTY-ONE HORSES LOST.

Caught in a Burning Livery Stable at New York.

NYACR, N. Y., Jan. 18.—Fire broke out at 2 o'clock this morning in the livery stable of Van Houten Brothers, at Church street and Broadway.

A large number of horses were kept in the stable. The employees began taking them out as fast as they could, but twenty-one of the animals could not be released in time, and were either burned to death or suffocated.

The neighing and snorting of the imprisoned animals could be heard for half an hour. The flames spread so quickly that the local fire department could not prevent the destruction of the stable, although the flames saved the wholesale grocery store of Berch Brothers, which adjoined the stable.

The loss will be heavy.

DR. JENKINS DOUBTS IT.

Has No Faith in the Alleged Cholera Case in St. Paul.

Health officer Jenkins said this morning with regard to the dispatch from St. Paul, telling of the death of a passenger on a "See" train who had come to New York by the steamship Heigeland, of the Red Star line, that it was probably not a case of cholera.

The passenger account stated that the passenger's name was Albert Hogg; that he was one of a party of five, and that he was bound for Washington, D. C.

Dr. Jenkins said he thoroughly inspected the case, and found that the symptoms of cholera were not present. He said that he found all well on board. He doubts that all the symptoms of cholera were present, and that the case was a case of cholera.

Without other evidence, there is no more freezing water in the orange bowl.
